Hell's Kitchen

Gracies Dinnertime Theatre • Melancholy Predator

20 October, 1996 n.d.z

Culinary Critic

-Damn

Each week, our resident critic takes a look at what's going on and shares his esteemed opinion with us....

I'd like to start off by giving notice to all four of our consistent readers that any mistakes they saw in my column last week were the fault of my worthless editors. Thank you.

Now, in Kelly's "Universe and Me" column last week, she implied that, firstly, people out there actually give a passing shit about her, and secondly, she likes abuse (Hello, Troy? I was wondering if you could do me a favor...). Well, that is, she's been told before that she's basically a wacko, and she welcomed anybody else to give it a try. Here goes.

For those of you who don't know what Kelly looks like, she goes around wearing no footgear (see that pic next to her column? footprints in the snow, buddy), she has long, dark, curly hair, and she always wears long skirts (Once, I saw her in overalls, and I freaked. Some things just should not be.). Oh, and she has une neck a la the Loch Ness Monster. Her magical abilities include the power to make cups and bowls (there's an RIT ceramics degree for you) and to horrifyingly contort herself--listen, her head can touch her back. But why does she not wear anything on her feet? Do I care? No. Am I doing this because the people at GDT have guilt-tripped me into a weekly column, and I couldn't think of anything else to fill this box with? Heavens, no.

So what is she, if not raised by wolves? A monster. She used to have a beautiful, idyllic life in a faraway land, but then she was caught consorting with pygmoids and exiled to RIT as punishment (Come on, you know mortal life doesn't get any worse than being here. And don't get me started on the tuition.). In her twisted human form, the barefoot deal is a result of her vile, earthly nature: she can't lose contact with the ground. Even when she's in a building, you can see her skin crawling while her soles and toes squirm in discomfort.

And that's Kelly. By the way, you may find in this issue a letter from a reader, who might not like the way I do things. My heart bleeds for you and your unitoothed relatives, pal. You want me to have Mr. Liston deal with your ass? Yeah, I didn't think so.

"But Thomas, ye maun hold your tongue,
Whatever you may hear or see,
For gin ae word you should chance to speak,

You will neer get back to your ain
countrie."

-Ballad of Thomas the Rhymer, 13th century

Come join the Circus we call the RIT Players

Open Meetings Tuesdays at 9pm in the Clark A Meeting Rm. in the SAU

New members are always welcome!

For more info email players@rit.edu

Subscriptions now offered

Hell's Kitchen now offers subscriptions to its publications. If you're going to be moving away from the area, or if you just can't seem to pick up a copy on time, this is your chance to get guaranteed delivery to your door for every issue we produce. For the entire Hell's Kitchen package, the subscription cost is only nine dollars for non-fan club members, and eight dollars for fan club members. This price will be subject to change only when the publications' lengths increase.

Numerous options available!

If you're interested just contact us through:

diablo@csh.rit.edu

Or you can write to our staff at:

Hell's Kitchen
472 French Rd.
Rochester, NY 14618

Send a subscription to someone you love, or someone you don't.

C e r e a l

A New Publication Dedicated to Prose

We're Looking for WRITERS

to submit material for a week of special issues celebrating the darkness and majesty that is Halloween

Deadline: October 23rd

For more information, contact sth8884@ritvax.rit.edu