-Damn

Each week, our resident critic takes a look at what's going on and shares his...esteemed opinion with us:

Pat Robertson of the Christian Coalition is a full-bore psycho. Someone like him, who is so high up in an organization that others look to for leadership, is really scary. Even scarier than, for example, that creepy Troy Liston guy. You should be seeing more quotes from Robertson that will back me up on this. He's my opening paragraph because I can't understate how dangerously insane this righteous loony is.

We did have some layout mistakes in Gracies Dinnertime Theatre this past week: some pics covered a few letters in "Definitions" (no biggie), and Live and Learn was messed, too (which is more of a loss, because those tend to be enjoyable). Another layout mistake was the front cover. That hat rack/mechanical thing was not particularly cool, and the dumb quote from Cereal made me not want to read it. The rest of Gracies Dinnertime Theatre went along without incident (Definitions are always fun.). Melancholy Predator (MP), on the other hand, was a little more questionable.

Their main feature was nice (text too small again...) EXCEPT that they referred to Pat Buchanan as a freak. What's up with that? I don't know anybody besides me who thinks that Pat is a great guy. Some people think that he's a Nazi, even. No comparison! Nazis killed people! Pat loves people! Okay, maybe only if you're his specific type of person. I don't agree with everything he says, but how can you reasonably argue with the Tactful Master of Social Policies? He will have have shown up at RIT by the time you read this; as I'm writing this, I haven't experienced the magic yet. I guess I could be totally wrong about him, in fact. But in the meantime, he's a great guy!!

MP also mentioned "guys who go to the movies together and insist on putting their jackets in the seat between them." I don't know where *MP*people go to the movies (most likely underneath those big flashy signs that advertise titles like "Anal Misconduct" and "Rear-End Collision"), but I've never seen this. Illus for MP were pretty good this week, though; liked the shot of the guy trapped in his girlfriend's bubble. Honeymoon's over for "End Time": I'm sick of it now.

Lastly, I wanna add my support for those people who've put up the three big posters around campus. Didn't like the blender, but loved the doll. More! More!
