

Gracies Dinnertime Theatre

As Seen on CCTV
Volume 37, Issue 4
17 September 81AT(2026)

Read all our issues at hellskitchen.org/gdt

Don't like it?
RECYCLE it!

KIT has a drug problem, but not in the way you'd think.

It was early in the morning, and I was attempting not to fall asleep during one of my lectures, when my professor asked us an interesting question. They had seen some statistics about drug use among college students, and said that RIT had lower drug use rates among all but one drug.

It was Adderall.

I was outraged. Adderall? Adderall? Are we truly such nerds and goody-two shoes that the only reason we go to a dealer is to get an A- in chemistry?

Now, though I could not find statistics for this, as I suspect that it is something only staff are privy to, it isn't exactly shocking if true. After all, our party scene grade is a C+.* Failing, but even our failing grade is mediocre.

We need to change this humiliating reputation[†] and bring Rochester to its proper glory. This is why I will be proposing the founding[‡] of a new drug ring.

Not just any drug ring, but the distribution will specifically be cocaine and poppers. No more lame nerd drugs for us. Not only will this significantly bolster our school as "cool," "interesting," "kind of twitchy" and "why poppers?" but this will also enrich the lives of students.

Feeling too tired to pull yourself out of bed? Snort a fat line. You'll be able to make it to your 8AM lecture on time and everything your professor says will seem like the most interesting thing in the world![§] Those two guys in your group project won't stop arguing? Give them some poppers and lock them in a room together for a few hours. Easiest way to solve any argument. Conflict resolution has never been better!

All that is required for this plan to be enacted now is to give our students a dealer, which is a position I will gladly take up.[¶] But I will not take that position as Dedusmuln, no, our students only buy drugs from folks that have names that make them sound like one of the three mutant mountain men from Wrong Turn. It's very easy to make a name like this, you just have to think of a number and a part of the body.

I recently ran a test run of my proposal, and unfortunately, the results did not go as planned. Most people I approached (very politely, I might add) were unjustifiably aggressive. I am simply a friendly drug lord attempting to establish a working relationship with students. I don't deserve reactions like, "you shouldn't be shouting to everyone in RITZ that you're selling cocaine" and "why poppers?" and "no one in their right mind would talk to someone who calls themselves one tooth and you don't even have one tooth so it doesn't even make sense."

* www.niche.com/colleges/rochester-institute-of-technology/

† Though, our signature food here is called the Garbage Plate. We really do it to ourselves at this point.

‡ Are drug rings founded? I will be christening mine with some champagne, personally.

§ Though your notes may be completely unreadable and/or tainted with nose blood.

¶ My art degree is useless as of two years ago, I gotta make money somehow.

DRAMATIS
PERSONÆ

Gracies Dinnertime Theatre (GDT) is a founding member of Hell's Kitchen (HK) and is published by Carissimus Diablo.

Editors:

Samboozled & Goose Waffles

Layout:

G.S.

Marginalia:

Goat Caroler, G.S., & the Rochester Indie Book and Zine Fair (RIBZF)

Featuring Garffeld by Sam Owen.

Main Article:

"My Proposal" by Dedusmuln

Writers:

Bullhorn Acacia, mighty_chondria, Wasi A. Go, Shitty Mocker, & denizens of the GDT Discord

Printer Daemons:

turpentine (dux), Bullhorn Acaia, Charlie, Wasi A. Go, S.H., Max, Ada H. Ominam, & wood man
Thank you to all of our newsies!

Contact GDT directly at:

graciesdinnertimetheatre@gmail.com

IMAGINUM AUCTORES

Page 3: Tuwim, Julian. "Demon sketch." 1926. Demon.
commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Demon.pdf

Page 4: Howe, James. "A Flock of Four Sheep." 1825–1839.
commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:A_Flock_of_Four_Sheep_-_James_Howe_-_ABDAG002783.3.jpg

Page 5: Unknown. "Ram." 1599–1622. Ex Antiquis Cameorum et Gemmae Delineata. www.metmuseum.org/art/collection/search/371870

Continued on page 3.

Copyright 81AT(2026) Gracies Dinnertime Theatre. GDT and HK are not sponsored or approved by RIT. I guess you can reprint things for all the reasons covered under United States Fair Use Doctrine as defined by the United States Congress with the "Copyright Act of 1976," but why not make your own? GDT is printed weekly. All the work remains copyright of the authors. GDT reserves the right to print or reprint authors' works.

This not only told me that my plan was faulty, but it also hurt my feelings. I suppose that it is back to the drawing board for little old Dedusmuln.

Why is the student body so unaccepting of young entrepreneurs? Why is the student body so unaccepting of methods that would let them stop being lame ass Adderall addicted nerds? They could start being cool ass coke addicted nerds. And most importantly: why poppers? I will go back to my home, a damp, dark cave system under the Terrence Building, and hopefully when I return, I shall have the answers to these questions. 🏠

** :{

Come visit GDT at the Rochester Indie Book & Zine Fair, part of the ESL Fringe Festival!

30 vendors will be selling their art and writing. Visit smallpressbookfair.com for a full list of vendors.

ROCHESTER INDIE BOOK & ZINE FAIR

Saturday, September 26th | 11a – 4p

RIT City Art Space
32 Adventure Place

Zines • Comics
Artists' Books
Photobooks
Poetry • Lit

Get Learnt

-by mighty_chondria

Hey kiddo, This week we’re looking at Thingiverse.com. It’s one of those places where you can make any idea turn into a real thing. I don’t care if you know the answer. You won’t always, that’s just how it is. Ask the right folks the right questions and you’ll be alright. Safe bet if you want to make a thing then someone else did too. Don’t start from scratch if you don’t need to.* Thingiverse is real simple and has reviews just like the recipe sites, so you know some other stranger liked it too. Don’t know how to model? I bet you can download a file. No 3D printer? Email it to the library,† they bill you for just the cost of the plastic you use.‡ This week try to print a Flock feeder. It’s real chic like those cameras all over now, but it’s actually a birdfeeder. Not interested in helping make cute bird pics? Use the search bar. They’ve got everything from Bulbasaur D20 holders to paper towel dispensers. Well, good luck hon and show me what you make this week. 📁

* Unless you just want the practice, and that’s okay too.
† At RIT, you will have to complete the SHED General Makerspace trainings and submit the file online.
‡ You can even modify some old files to do new stuff, but that’s for next week.

Is your poetry stuck in the Notes app?
Artwork languishing on your desktop?
GET IT PUBLISHED INSTEAD!
Submit your work to graciesdinnertimetheatre@gmail.com

Submit .docx or .rtf files, or high-quality images of artwork. GDT publishes weekly and is distributed across at least one campus.

C. Diablo (right) looks forward to reading your submissions.

IMAGINUM AUCTORES. CONT.

Page 6: Funknendai. “Pile of ‘I Voted’ Stickers.” 2025.
commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Pile_of_%22I_Voted%22_stickers.jpg

Page 8: Ross, M.T. Penny. “Pumpkin illustration.” 1914.
Mother Earth’s Children. commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Mother_Earth%27s_Children_p.92.jpg

Diablo’s “minions” will assist him.

“You and Me:” the Language of Sheep

-by Bullhorn Acaia

The English language is decrepit and riddled with vestigial organs which, having once served some arcane purpose to our ancestors long lost to time, now simply flap disquietingly in the wind and lower the property value. Not the least of which among these sinful wastes is the phrase “you and me,” the objectively inferior counterpart of “you and I.”

“But Bullhorn,” I hear you screaming and spraying spittle all over the page, “Aren’t you supposed to use both ‘you and me’ and ‘you and I’ depending on the situation?” And to that I say, “Shut up and die.”

Small choices in wording can mean a lot, and I find it preposterous to give up one’s personal voice for such nebulous things as “grammatical correctness” and “eloquence.” An effective communicator should be mindful of the subtextual energies behind each of their words and eschew words that hamper their mission. Case in point: the difference between passive and active language. The passive speaker who addresses themselves as an object is the natural prey of the active speaker who describes the world only in relation to themselves and their goals.

It becomes obvious that “you and me” is charged with a depressingly passive energy: “Something’s happening to you and me.” “There’s a great distance between you and me.” The resignation of oneself to a “me”— the brick, the mud pile, a mere consonant away from “meh”—is sure to bring ruin.

Conversely, “you and I” bears the gait of a confident, active speaker: “You and I are experiencing something.” “You and I are traveling a great distance.” The greats of history always strive to be “I,” the spear, the pillar, recognizable by a single letter. This is why emperors like Qin Shi Huangdi, Hammurabi, and Alexander the Great have never once been recorded saying or writing the word “me.”

It may seem like a small, insignificant change to your vocabulary that doesn’t really have an effect on much of anything, but I think you’ll see that the small things add up. The more you introduce active attitudes into your life, the less time you’ll spend at home on your phone and the more you’ll find yourself making plans, going out on the town, attending club meetings, reading Gracies Dinnertime Theatre, joining the Gracies Dinnertime Theatre Discord server, submitting your writing to graciesdinnertimetheatre@gmail.com...to name a few. If you’re reading this and find that you’ve been living like a “me,” try to think of how you can start acting like an “I.”

Also, “me” has more letters than “I,” and I don’t want to have to read that much. 📖

I!

I!

I!

Be an “I.” Join our Discord server today for more GDT!

Anyone Who Ever Says “You and I” is Stupid and Evil

-by Bullhorn Acaia

The fundamentals of the International Typographic Style* tell us that legibility is everything. If someone on their daily commute glances passingly at an old telephone pole and doesn't immediately notice and understand what the poster stapled on it says, that poster is worthless. This way of thinking should also be applied to our language structure, with our greatest roadblock to legibility being the infernal letter “I.” In its simplest form, it is an mere line, easily mistakable for an unembellished number “1,” lowercase “l” or that thing over the backslash key on your computer. To make matters worse, the letter has wormed its way into our linguistic zeitgeist as an entire word in its own right, resulting in many an ambiguous sentence. Take the following exchange, for example:

“Does anyone have an opinion on which letters should be removed from the alphabet?”

“Not I!”

Confusing, right? Now imagine an commonly used phrase, in some cases used as an entire sentence, in which every word can be mistaken for an letter. The elephant in the room rears its head. “You and I.” The word “you” is indistinguishable in pronunciation from the letter “U,” and depending on how fast the speaker says it, the word “and” could be interpreted as an “N.” Thus, this simple phrase can be heard as “U and I,” “UNI,” “You NI” (perhaps an form of name-calling), “Ewe NI” (in sheep-related contexts), “UN Eye” (pertaining to international surveillance), et cetera.

In everyday cases, such misunderstandings might have no further consequences than an shared moment of laughter, but when it comes to life or death, the difference between an letter and an word can be the deciding factor in whether an delivery truck makes it to the harbor safely or causes the deadliest automobile crash of the 21st century. For this reason, me have resolved to avoid using any words comprised of an single letter in my writing, save for when me am indeed describing the letter itself. Me am aware that the resulting sentences are reminiscent of certain cave-folk descriptions, and me ask that you look past it.

In fact, the honorable Cathi Rosenberg-Turow and Lisa Simon, writer and director respectively for the iconic children's television program Sesame Street, made an point of satirizing this lapse in our language conventions with their sketch “Monsterpiece Theater: The King and I,” in which the Muppet Grover (now the titular king) consorts with an animate letter “i.”† However, even here, the authors opt for an lowercase “i,” seeing as the capital version would simply be an vertical line or, with serifs, resemble an uppercase “T” when the bottom of the letter is not visible.

Stop this madness! There is an simple solution to the linguistic horrors described above: “You and me.” This small change to the word “me” anchors the letter-like phrase in the context of an sequence of words, not letters, and the “M” sound forces an short pause in speech, which makes the “and” more pronounced. This limits the potential misunderstandings to “U and me” or “Ewe and me” (in sheep-related contexts). These are the kinds of steps that we need to be taking in order to achieve an world in which verbal misunderstandings are all but eradicated. ▣

* Layout editor's note: contrary to popular belief, we don't hate sans serif typefaces, grids, or non-justified text. They just simply aren't the style of Gracies Dinnertime Theatre.

† Grover, puppet. “Monsterpiece Theater: The King and I.” Sesame Street. PBS, 1990. First aired in “Episode 2727: A Day at the Library.”

GDT’s Midterm Ballot

-from the elliptical office of Shitty Mocker

*F*or (y)our convenience, and reasons you will soon understand, the candidates are arranged alphabetically by the first letter of their first or only name. Choose wisely!

Alexandria Moses
Highway-Beauty Party

Richter the Raubritter
Respectable Center Conservative Party

Fork McCubbins
Metal Utensils for Climate Action Party

Shit E. Soccer
United Party of Balls Party

Gurrigark the All-Eater
Extraterrestrial Rights Party

Sigmund Freud
Republican Party

Jane Doe
Independent Party

Sil E. Fool
Jesters of America Party

Jimmy Cheese from Springfield, Missouri
Lactose Party

Sir Titt E. Fuque
Society of Fingers U.S. Chapter Party

John Paulitics
Kill All Dolphins Party

Xx_diplomacy_georg_xX_2014
LAN Party

Lone Wolf Paperstacker
The Hood Party

Your Mom
MILF Party†

* Not in any way associated with the U.S. Cheese Reserves.
† Man I Loathe Frogs.

Comic Corner

-curated by G.S.

Comic by Sam Owen

dsoart.com • IG: @dsosartdotcom

GARFFELD

D5OART.COM

Cross-Dominance, or; the Prevalence of Christian Cultural Norms in the West and its Relation to Ambidexterity

-by Wasi A. Go

Did you know that 90% of people worldwide aren't left handed?* Though that number is obtained a bit dubiously due to systemic reporting issues in historically left-handed countries (Japan, New England, Washington[†]), there's good reason for it. America was built off the values of Christians, Jews, Puritans, Quakers, General Mills, and anyone else that's been on a cereal box, and it reflects in our cultural institutions.

As a man of the cloth myself[‡] some of my friends not of the faith may not be aware of the culling process for the malicious among us. Some of my fondest memories of mass as a child are fabricated, because my parents are atheists, but despite this, I vividly remember the weeks in which newly aged five year olds would be required to place their hands in the little box[§] that ensured the number of fingers on your dominant hand matched your age. And aside from one tragic Sunday involving an incident with the town's resident factory-working preschooler, the ritual proceeded without issue, except for the left-handed members of the congregation. It was not born out of malice (haha), but ignorance: the Puritans had actually never met a left-handed person before, and as such, placed the thumb hole of the aforementioned box on the left.

On one such week, when misbegotten J*hnny[¶] stepped up to the box- newly acquired Megatron figure clutched tightly in his tragically, tragically non-dominant right hand— and failed to fill all five finger-shaped holes with hole-shaped fingers—the whirlwind of providence that followed, my impressionable mind has not yet forgotten. The light, the sound, the disdain for mirrored scissors— when it was over, only Megatron remained, his left arm (I think that's the one that usually has the cannon) severed at the base. Since that day, I've been affirmed of my faith, the systemic issues that result in the lower life expectancy for the left-handed, and my disdain for any and all handedness-related out-groups. This sentiment does not extend, however, to the foot-dominance present in board sports— all the people at the skatepark call me “goofy.” Not cool, guys. ☒

* It's true!

† The state.

‡ Tommy Bahama, though I'm also a Christian

§ Kinda like the box from Dune, if you're familiar with the hand-sized box from Dune

¶ Name censored for anonymity.

Tunnel Terror

-by Bullhorn Acacia

Fresh coat of white paint
Head in the sand
Drawings of horses
Don't fit the brand

Axes to epics
Torches to verse
Remembering things is hard
But forgetting is worse

Seeking advice?
Ask Susan!

She will be back...
eventually...to answer
your questions.

The Return of GDT's

All Hallow's Eve Story Contest

1st Place: $150

2nd Place: $50

Submission Deadline:
October 21st, 2026

How to submit:

- 1) Save your work as a .docx or .rtf file.
- 2) Name your document with your last name as the file name (psuedonyms accepted).
- 3) Give us information to contact you.
- 4) Fill out the google form using the QR code to submit your work.

Top submissions will be published in a special late-autumn issue.

*All submissions remain the intellectual property of the author. Stories must be fall- or spooky-themed.
Limit of 7,500 words (long-form) or 15 pages (for poetry).*

